

In 1992, the Southwest Orlando Bulletin — then just a little more than 6 years old — introduced what has become a Southwest Orlando institution — the annual Best Mom in Southwest contest. Now in its 21st year, the contest has grown from just 300 entries in that first year to almost 1,000 submissions in 2012. What started as a contest for school-age children is now a way for child and adult residents alike to express to their moms how important they truly are. It seems that mothers are perpetually protecting their children from the ills of the world, tirelessly cooking and cleaning, and preparing their children for adult life, all while managing to somehow be the kindest and gentlest women, despite occasionally having to dole out discipline. Congratulations to this year's winners: Ian Manubens, overall winner; Morgan McCain, 13-and-older winner; Isabella Hernandez, 9-12 winner; and Sabrina Violtat, 8-younger winner, and all of our honorable mentions. They join a long list of past participants who believe that their mothers truly are the best.
